

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

“ There is between us one common name and appellation, one faith and necessary body of principles common to us both ; and therefore I am not scrupulous to converse and live with them, to enter their Churches in defect of ours, and either to pray with them, or for them . . . we being all Christians, and not divided by such detested impieties as might prophane our Prayers, or the place wherein we make them ; or that a resolved Conscience may not adore her Creator any where, especially in places devoted to His service. . . . It is an unjust scandal of our adversaries, and a gross error in our selves, to compute the Nativity of our Religion from Henry the Eighth. . . . It is as uncharitable a point in us to fall upon those popular scurrilities and opprobrious scoffs of the Bishop of Rome. . . . It is the method of Charity to suffer without reaction.”—SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici, 1635.

P R E F A C E

No guide for strangers to the Latin Mass has ever been published, it would seem, with the exception of a little book written by a Roman Catholic, now long out of print. The present work differs from the above-mentioned in that it is written frankly from the Anglican standpoint. Though a study, now extending over many years, of the Roman Church and her work has served to deepen the writer's admiration for the devotion of her sons and the service of the primatial See of Christendom to the maintenance of the Catholic Faith ; yet he must state in honesty that he remains unconvinced as to the historical truth of the Papal claims, and persuaded that they have been largely responsible for a divided Christendom. Consequently he remains, as bound by conscience, in the Church of England where it has pleased God to place him.

This Guide is intended for the use of those members of the Church of England travelling on the Continent of Europe who, from their inability to follow the celebration of the Eucharist in its Latin form, must often find themselves deprived of any opportunity of liturgical worship. Should this attempt to make the Latin Liturgy intelligible be appreciated, the writer hopes to edit a similar volume containing the Liturgy of St. Chrysostom, for the use of travellers in Russia, Greece, Turkey, and other countries within the jurisdiction of the Holy Orthodox Eastern Church.

A Second Edition having been called for, a few alterations have been made and some fresh notes added.

INTRODUCTORY NOTES

1. THIS Guide is for a High Mass, i.e. a service of full ceremonial with a deacon and a subdeacon assisting the priest. It will serve equally well for what is called abroad a Missa cantata—that is, a sung Mass without assistant ministers, in which the celebrant sings the Epistle and Gospel himself. There is another form of service especially popular in Germany—i.e. a Low Mass with hymns, these being in the vernacular. This Guide will be of little use for such a service, or for a simple Low Mass, because in these cases the whole of the Liturgy is said by the priest in so low a voice as to be inaudible. The people can follow because they are perfectly familiar with the ceremonies. The stranger will do well to begin with the High Mass ; when once he has learnt to follow this he will find no difficulty in assisting intelligently at a Low Mass. He is also advised to avoid at the outset a High Mass at which a bishop celebrates or pontifically assists ; for on these occasions the additional ceremonial would prove confusing.

2. This Guide is of no use on Good Friday and Holy Saturday. On Good Friday the Mass of the Pre-sanctified is celebrated, and on Easter Even the first Mass of Easter, which is much abbreviated (or, rather, preserves the features of extreme antiquity, to the exclusion of later liturgical additions), is sung between the Paschal Benedictions and Vespers, so that the whole forms one long and complicated service. As regards the other Holy Week Eucharists it should be noted that on Palm Sunday, and the following Tuesday and Wednesday, the Passion of our Lord according to one of the Four Evangelists is sung (properly by three voices) immediately before the Gospel. On Maundy Thursday, after the Mass, the Holy Sacrament is carried in solemn procession from the high altar to the "altar of repose."

3. It is important that the stranger should be punctual, for it will not be easy for him to take up the service in the middle. This entails some trouble. Hotel-keepers rarely know at what o'clock the Mass begins; they and their servants, if they attend Divine worship, generally fulfil their obligations at a Low Mass and at an early hour. It is best to go to the cathedral, or church, the day before and look at the notice-board. The hour for High Mass on the Continent is rarely earlier than nine or later than about ten o'clock. In cathedrals there is usually a Chapter High Mass every day, and as this is sung to simple liturgical music and the proper portions for the day duly chanted, it is, perhaps, the best service for the stranger to begin with.

4. The Roman Rite is now used throughout all the Roman Catholic countries of the Continent, except in the archdiocese of Lyons, where the Romano-Lyons Rite¹ is used, and in numerous churches in the province of Milan, where the Ambrosian Liturgy still serves some million souls. Certain of the religious orders (e.g. Dominicans and Carthusians) follow their own Rites, and exceptional local Rites are used in one or two places in the Peninsula. (The Oriental Rites of the Uniats—Eastern Christians who acknowledge the Pope—are by themselves, and are not here considered.) But although the Liturgy itself is the same wherever the Roman Rite is used, and the ceremonies are usually supposed to be those ordered by the central authority, many local customs still survive, particularly in Spain, and there are also different ways of rendering the service in other countries. To note all these possible variations not only would be a difficult task, but would complicate this Guide to the point of uselessness. But one custom, frequently met with, especially in France, may be noted here. It is very usual to sing alternate phrases of the liturgical compositions allotted to the choir, such, for instance, as the Gloria in excelsis and the Creed, and for the organ to play an interlude in place of the omitted phrases. Sometimes, indeed, the unsung phrase is audibly said before or during the interlude. A specimen is subjoined which will suffice to show this system of singing; the omitted phrases are placed within brackets.

Priest intones, Gloria in excelsis Deo ; Choir, Et in terra pax hominibus bonæ voluntatis. [Laudamus te] organ plays ; Choir, Benedicimus te ; [Adoramus te] organ plays ; Choir, Glorificamus te. [Gratias agimus tibi propter magnam gloriam tuam] organ plays ; Choir, Domine deus, Rex cælestis, Deus Pater omnipotens. [Domine Fili unigenite Jesu Christe] organ plays. Choir, Domine deus, Agnus dei, Filius Patris, [Qui tollis peccata mundi, miserere nobis], and so on.

5. The Collects, Epistles, and Gospels, with the other parts of the service proper to the day—i.e. Introits, Graduals, etc.—are not given in this book. The stranger who has mastered the service with the help of this Guide will find them in a Roman Missal (the best pocket editions are published by Desclée, Lefebvre et Cie., Tournay, and are sold by Burns & Oates in London), or in that useful book of public prayers known in France as a Paroissien, to be had in Latin, or in Latin and French side by side. But it is not easy even for one familiar with the Latin services to find the "proper" for the day unless it happens to be given on the church notice-board. Local and diocesan feasts constantly dislocate the kalendar as printed in the Roman service-books, and the rules of the kalendar itself are far more complicated than those of our familiar Book of Common Prayer. ("The hardness of the Rules called the Pie," so "that many times there was more business to find out what should be read than to read it when found out," is given, it will be remembered, in the Preface to the Prayer-book as a reason for the new Order.) The two following hints may be of some help.

(a) Look for the colour of the vestments. If red or white (out of Christmas and Eastertide) it is generally the service of some Holy-day and not of the Sunday, i.e. Proprium or Commune Sanctorum, not Proprium Temporis.

(b) In Advent, and from Septuagesima to Low Sunday, i.e. the first after Easter, the Mass of the Sunday usually takes precedence of any feast. But on ordinary Sundays some Holy-day almost invariably displaces the Sunday services (thus it is rare to see a High Mass in green, the ordinary Sunday colour). Therefore it is a safe rule to consult the kalendar or the Proprium Sanctorum first and see whose day it is. Most of the days in the Roman kalendar are allotted to the memory of some Saint.

6. The following simple directions as to sitting, standing, and kneeling will enable the stranger to take part in a Latin Mass without disturbing others and attracting attention to himself. It should be said, however, that foreigners are much less stiff and self-conscious than we are in church, and they are more individual in their attitude of devotion; the whole congregation does not rise or kneel with the unanimity to which we are accustomed.

Kneel for private prayer on taking your place, then sit till the service begins. Kneel or stand from the time the celebrant and his ministers enter until the beginning of the Kyrie, then sit. Stand for the Gospel, then sit for the Creed and Offertory. (But it is usual to kneel at the clause Et incarnatus est, etc., in the Creed.) Kneel for the Sanctus, and remain kneeling until after the Consecration and Elevation at the least, and then again at the Communion of the celebrant, or until the ablutions have been taken. Kneel for the Blessing and stand for the Last Gospel, kneeling at Et verbum caro factum est, and again for private prayer as the priest and his ministers leave the sanctuary. If chairs are used you either kneel on a kneeling-chair in front of you, or turn your chair round, if you have but one, and kneel on that.

It is the custom in foreign churches to bend the knee on passing or turning away from the high altar or the altar (not necessarily the high altar) at which the Holy Sacrament is reserved ; but no reverences are made to the minor altars. The presence of the Reserved Sacrament may be known by three signs, the first being invariable :—(a) A light burning before the altar (sometimes, however, images and other altars have similar lamps). (b) A little finger-glass and napkin standing on the altar (for washing the priest's fingers after giving the Holy Communion out of Mass time). (c) The veil before the tabernacle, and the white houseling-cloth hanging on the altar rails.

7. Benches and chairs are often reserved for parishioners, as with us ; be careful, therefore, to take a place without a name on it. During the service (often at very unsuitable times !) a woman will come round for your chair-money, in France usually a sou for one chair and two if you have a kneeling-chair as well. Sometimes you take a chair from the woman at the door and carry it to the position you wish to occupy during the service.

8. The morning services in an ordinary parish church consist of Low Masses and a solemn offering of the Eucharist with music. The latter is often followed by a late Low Mass at eleven or twelve o'clock, known in France by the sarcastic name of la messe des paresseux ! There is nothing for the people corresponding to our Mattins, though in cathedral, collegiate, and monastic churches the Psalter is duly recited in the Divine office of the choir, Terce being said directly before the High Mass. But early in the afternoon, Vespers, or Evensong, sometimes with Compline, is sung as a popular service, followed by Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament (French, Salut). This is a service of Eucharistic worship developed in comparatively recent times, which, except in the churches of the more conservative religious orders, has completely overshadowed the ancient offices of psalmody. Catechising, recitation of the rosary, and evening devotions, partly in the vernacular (French, Prières du soir), complete the cycle of public devotions. But in Holy Week the office of Tenebræ, i.e. Mattins and Lauds for the next day, sung by anticipation on the previous afternoon, remains a popular devotion.

The Asperges

On Sundays, immediately before the principal Mass, a short service called the ASPERGES takes place. The Celebrant, vested in a cope, enters the sanctuary with the Deacon and Subdeacon, and a short procession is made, during which the holy water is sprinkled.

Whilst this ceremony is taking place the Choir sing :

Ant. Asperges me,
Domine, hyssopo, et mundabor : lavabis me, et super nivem
dealbabor.

Ps. Miserere mei
Deus ; secundum magnam misericordiam tuam.

Gloria Patri, et Filio :
et Spiritui sancto.

Ant. Thou shalt
purge me with hyssop, O Lord, and I shall be clean : thou shalt wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.

Ps. Have mercy upon me, O God, after thy great goodness.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son : and to the Holy Ghost.

Sicut erat in principio, et nunc, et semper : et in sæcula sæculorum. Amen.

Asperges me, Domine, etc., is repeated.

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be : world without end. Amen.

Thou shalt purge me, etc., is repeated.

Or, from Easter to Pentecost :

Ant. Vidi aquam egredientem de templo a latere dextro, Alleluia ; et omnes ad quos pervenit aqua ista salvi facti sunt, et dicent, Alleluia, Alleluia.

Ps. Confitemini Domino, quoniam bonus : quoniam in sæculum misericordia ejus.

Gloria, etc. Vidi aquam, etc.

Ant. I saw a stream of water flowing from the temple, out of the right side, Alleluia ; and whithersoever that water flowed all were made whole, and they say, Alleluia, Alleluia.

Ps. O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is gracious : for his mercy endureth for ever.

Glory, etc. I saw, etc.

The Celebrant, returning to the Lord's Table, says :

V. Ostende nobis, Domine, misericordiam tuam.

R. Et salutare tuum da nobis.

V. Domine, exaudi orationem meam,

V. O Lord, show thy mercy upon us.

R. And grant us thy salvation.

V. O Lord, hear my prayer.

V. Dominus vobis-
cum.

R. Et cum spiritu

R. And let my cry
come unto thee.

V. The Lord be with you.

R. And with thy spirit.

Oremus.

Let us pray.

Exaudi nos, Do-
mine sancte, Pater
omnipotens, æterne
Deus; et mittere dig-neris sanctum angel-um tuum de cœlis, qui tegat, visitet, atque

Amen.

Hear us, O holy Lord, Almighty Father, eternal God; and vouchsafe to send thy holy Angel from heaven, to guard, cherish, protect, visit, and defend all who dwell in this place. Through Christ our Lord.
Amen.

The Celebrant and his ministers now retire from the front of the altar, and he changes his cope for a chasuble.

When the GLORIA IN EXCELSIS is sung the Celebrant intones the opening words, saying the remainder while they are sung by the Choir :

Gloria in excelsis Deo ; Et in terra pax hominibus bonæ voluntatis. Laudamus te. Benedicimus te. Adoramus te. Glorificamus te. Gratias agimus tibi propter magnam gloriam tuam. During this, either the Choir sing the GRADUAL ¹ for the day, or the organ plays.

The Deacon places the Book of the Gospels on the Lord's Table, and the Celebrant blesses the incense. The Deacon says :

There are also five metrical compositions, called Sequences, which are sung on certain occasions after the Alleluia or Tract,—i.e. Victimæ paschali, at Easter; Veni Sancte Spiritus, at Whitsuntide; Lauda Syon, on the Feast of Corpus Christi; Stabat mater, on the Third Sunday in September; and Dies iræ, at Black Masses. Then, taking the Book of the Gospels from the altar, the Deacon, kneeling, asks the Celebrant's blessing, saying:

The Celebrant answers:

The GOSPEL is sung.

(If there be a SERMON in the Mass this is the place for it and the Bidding Prayer. Here also, before the SERMON, the notices are given out, and sometimes the EPISTLE and GOSPEL for the day, which have just been sung liturgically, are read in the vernacular from the pulpit.)

At certain times (e.g. in Black Masses) the CREED is omitted; otherwise the Celebrant intones the opening words, and then, completing its recitation privately, goes with his ministers to their seats on the south side of the sanctuary whilst the Choir are singing it.

Credo in unum Deum, Patrem omni- potentem, factorem cœli et terræ, visibi- lium omnium, et in- visibilium.	I believe in one God, the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth, And of all things visible and invisible.

Then, offering the Bread, he prays thus :

Receive, O Holy Father, Almighty, Eternal God, this spot

this rather long interval the organ plays a voluntary. Sometimes the voluntary is preceded by the Offertory sentence for the day, sung by the Choir.

(N.B.—In French churches a cake or loaf is brought in at the Offertory on Sundays, often with considerable pomp. This is blessed and the pieces, pain béni, handed round to the congregation in baskets. It is the custom for each person to take a piece and make the sign of the cross with it before eating it. Additional pieces are sometimes taken home for those members of the family who are unable to be present.)

We now turn to page 52.

immaculatum Hostiam, quam ego indignus famulus tuus offero tibi Deo meo vivo et vero, pro innumerabilibus peccatis, et offensionibus, et negligentis meis, et pro omnibus circumstantibus; sed et pro omnibus fidelibus Christianis, vivis atque defunctis; ut mihi et illis proficiat ad salutem in vitam æternam. Amen.

Putting the Wine and Water into the Chalice :

Deus, qui humanæ substantiæ dignitatem mirabiliter condidisti, et mirabilius reformasti: da nobis per hujus aquæ et vini mysterium, ejus divinitatis esse consortes, qui humanitatis nostræ fieri dignatus est particeps, Jesus Christus, Filius tuus, Dominus noster: qui tecum vivit et regnat in unitate Spiritus sancti

O God, who in creating human nature didst wonderfully dignify it, and hast still more wonderfully renewed it; grant that, by the mystery of this Water and Wine, we may be made partakers of his divinity, who vouchsafed to become partaker of our humanity, Jesus Christ, thy Son, our Lord; who liveth and

He offers the Chalice :

Offerimus tibi, Domine, calicem salutaris, tuam deprecantes clementiam, ut in conspectu divinæ Majestatis tuæ, pro nostra et totius mundi salute cum odore suavitatis ascendat. Amen.

We offer unto thee, O Lord, the Cup of salvation, beseeching thy mercy, that in the sight of thy divine Majesty, it may go up as a sweet-smelling savour, for our health and that of the whole world. Amen.

Bowing his head he says :

In spiritu humilitatis et in animo contrito suscipiamur a te, Domine ; et sic fiat sacrificium nostrum in conspectu tuo hodie, ut placeat tibi, Domine Deus.

In the spirit of humility and with a contrite heart, let us be accepted, O Lord, by thee ; and so let our sacrifice be in thy sight this day that it may be well-pleasing unto thee, O Lord my God.

Then, raising his eyes to heaven :

Veni sanctificator,

Come, O Sanctifier,

Deus, et benedic hoc sacrificium tuo sancto
nomini præparatum.

God, and bless this sacrifice, prepared to thy holy Name.

He blesses the incense :

Per intercessionem
beati Michaelis Archangeli, stantis a dextris altaris incensi, et omnium electorum suorum, incensum istud digne-tur Dominus benedi-cere, et in odorem suanostrum. Amen.

May the Lord, by the intercession of blessed Michael the Archangel, standing at the right hand of the altar of incense, and of all his elect, vouchsafe to bless this incense, and receive it as an odour of sweetness.
Through Christ our Lord. Amen.

He censes the Bread and Wine :

Incensum istud a te benedictum ascendat ad te, Domine, et descendat super nos
misericordia tua.

May this incense
blest by thee, O Lord, ascend unto thee, and may thy mercy descend upon us.

And then the altar :

Dirigatur, Domine, oratio mea sicut incensum in conspectu
tuo : elevatio manuum
me arum sacrificium
vespertinum.

Let my prayer be set forth in thy sight as the incense : and let the lifting up of my hands be an evening sacrifice.

Pone, Domine, custodiamori meo, et ostium circumstantiæ labiis meis: ut non declinet cor meum in verba malitiæ, ad excusandas excusationes in peccatis.

Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth: and keep the door of my lips.

O let not mine heart be inclined to any evil thing: let me not be occupied in ungodly works with the men that work wickedness.

He returns the censer to the Deacon with these words:

Ascendat in nobis Dominus ignem sui amoris, et flammam æternæ caritatis. Amen.

May the Lord kindle in us the fire of his love, and the flame of everlasting charity. Amen.

The Celebrant is censed, and then the others. The Celebrant goes to the south side of the altar, and whilst water is poured over his hands he says the following psalm:

Lavabo inter innocentes manus meas: et circumdabo altare tuum, Domine.

I will wash my hands in innocency, O Lord: and so will I go to thine altar;

Ut audiam vocem laudis: et enarrem universa mirabilia tua.

That I may show the voice of thanksgiving: and tell of all thy wondrous works.

Domine dilexi decorem domus tuæ:

Lord, I have loved the habitation of thy house:

et locum habitationis
gloriæ tuæ.

Ne perdas cum impiis, Deus, animam meam : et cum viris sanguinum vitam meam.

In quorum manibus iniquitates sunt : dextera eorum repleta est muneribus.

Ego autem in innocentia mea ingressus sum : redime me, et miserere mei.

Pes meus stetit in directo : in ecclesiis benedicam te, Domine.

and the place where thine honour dwelleth.

O shut not up my soul with the sinners : nor my life with the blood-thirsty ;

In whose hands is wickedness : and their right hand is full of gifts.

But as for me, I will walk innocently : O deliver me, and be merciful unto me.

My foot standeth right : I will praise the Lord in the congregations.

Glory be, etc.

Returning to the midst of the altar he says :

Suscipe, sancta Trinitas, hanc oblationem quam tibi offerimus ob memoriam passionis, resurrectionis, et ascensionis Jesu Christi Domini nostri : et in honorem beatæ Mariæ semper Virginis, et beati Joannis Baptistæ, et sanctorum Apostolorum Petri et

Receive, O holy Trinity, this oblation, which we offer unto thee, in memory of the Passion, Resurrection, and Ascension of our Lord Jesus Christ, and in honour of blessed Mary ever-Virgin, of blessed John Baptist, the holy Apostles Peter and Paul, and

Meanwhile the Celebrant makes his communion, at which a bell is generally rung in order that the people may join with him by an act of spiritual communion.

rarely takes place, however, at a High Mass. The form is as follows :—

The communicants having gone up to the altar at the words Domine, non sum dignus, a minister spreads the houseling-cloth before them and says in their name the Confiteor (see above, p. 23). Then the Celebrant, turning towards them, pronounces the Absolution :

Misereatur vestri omnipotens Deus et dimissis peccatis vestris, perducat vos ad vitam æternam.

R. Amen.

Indulgentiam, absolu-tionem, et remissionem pecca-torum, vestrorum tribuat vobis
omnipotens et misericors Dominus.

R. Amen.

May Almighty God have mercy on you, forgive you your sins, and bring you to life everlasting.

R. Amen.

May the Almighty and merciful Lord give you pardon, absolution, and remission of your sins.

R. Amen.

Holding up the Blessed Sacrament, he says :

Ecce Agnus Dei, ecce qui tollit peccata mundi.

Behold the Lamb of God, behold him who taketh away
the sins of the world.

He says thrice DOMINE, NON SUM DIGNUS, etc., and then delivers the Sacrament to the communicants, saying to each :

Corpus Domini nostri Jesu
Christi custodiat animam tuam in vitam æternam. Amen.

The Body of our Lord Jesus Christ preserve thy soul unto everlasting life. Amen.

The Celebrant, going from the south side of the altar to the midst, turns to the people and chants :

V. Dominus vobis-	V. The Lord be
cum.	with you.

R. Et cum spiritu	R. And with thy
tuo.	spirit.

He goes back to the south side and says :

Oremus.

Let us pray.

He reads out loud the Post-Communion prayers for the day.

Returning to the midst of the altar he chants again :

V. Dominus vobis-	V. The Lord be
cum.	with you.

R. Et cum spiritu	R. And with thy
tuo.	spirit.

Before the second :

Corpus tuum, Domine, quod sumpsi, et Sanguis quem potavi, adhæreat visceribus meis : et præsta, ut in me non remaneat scelerum macula, quem pura et sancta refecerunt sacramenta. Qui vivis et regnas in sæcula sæculorum. Amen.

May thy Body, O Lord, which I have received, and thy Blood which I have drunk, cleave to my flesh ; and grant that no stain of sin may remain in me, who have been refreshed with pure and holy sacraments. Who livest and reignest for ever and ever. Amen.

He now reads the Communion anthem for the day.

V. Dominus vobiscum.

V. The Lord be with you.

R. Et cum spiritu tuo.

R. And with thy spirit.

Oremus.

Let us pray.

Then the Post-Communion prayers for the day.

V. Dominus vobiscum.

V. The Lord be with you.

R. Et cum spiritu tuo.

R. And with thy spirit.

Then the Deacon, half turning to the people, gives the demission, singing to an elaborate chant :

and there is no BLESSING.]

These are the last words sung in the Mass, as the Celebrant, after a moment's pause for the PLACEAT TIBI turns round and gives the BLESSING inaudibly. If a Bishop celebrates, after two preliminary versicles and responses he chants the BLESSING, and makes the sign of the Cross three times over the people instead of once.

All now stand for the Last GOSPEL, which is Deacon. Go, the Mass is over (or, Let us bless the Lord).

R. Thanks be to God.

Grant, O holy Trinity, that this my bounden duty and service may be pleasing unto thee; and grant that this sacrifice which I, unworthy, have offered up in the sight of thy majesty, may be accepted by thee, and through thy mercy may be a propitiation for me, and all for whom I have offered it. Through Christ our Lord. Amen.

Turning round, he blesses the people :

R. Gloria tibi, Domine.

In principio erat Verbum, et Verbum erat apud Deum; et Deus erat Verbum. Hoc erat in principio apud Deum. Omnia per ipsum facta sunt, et sine ipso factum est nihil quod factum est. In ipso vita erat, et vita erat lux hominum; et lux in tenebris lucet, et tenebræ eam non comprehenderunt. Fuit homo missus a Deo, cui nomen erat Joannes. Hic venit in testimonium ut testimonium perhiberet de lumine, ut omnes crederent per illum. Non erat ille lux: sed ut testimonium perhiberet de lumine. Erat holy Gospel according to St. John.

R. Glory be to thee, O Lord.

In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made. In him was life, and the life was the light of men. And the light shineth in darkness, and the darkness comprehended it not. There was a man sent from God, whose name was John. The same came for a witness, to bear witness of the light, that all men through him might believe. He was not that light, lux vera quæ illuminat omnem hominem venientem in hunc mundum. In mundo erat, et mundus per ipsum factus est, et mundus eum non cognovit. In propria venit, et sui eum non receperunt. Quotquot autem receperunt eum, dedit eis potestatem filios Dei fieri: his qui credunt in nomine ejus, qui non ex sanguinibus, neque ex voluntate carnis, neque ex voluntate viri, sed ex Deo nati sunt. ET VERBUM CARO FACTUM EST, et habitavit in nobis; et vidimus gloriam ejus, gloriam quasi Unigeniti a Patre, plenum gratiæ et veritatis, but was sent to bear witness of that light. That was the true light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world. He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not. He came unto his own, and his own received him not. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his Name: which were born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God. AND THE WORD WAS MADE FLESH, and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only-begotten of the Father), full of grace and truth.

R. Deo gratias.

R. Thanks be to God.

It is very meet, right, and our bounden duty that we should at all times sing thy glory, O Lord. But chiefly are we bound to praise thee when Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us. Ut iisdem rectoribus gubernetur, quos operis tui vicarios eidem contulisti præesse pastores. Et ideo cum Angelis et Archangelis, etc.

It is very meet, right, and our bounden duty humbly to implore thee, O Lord, that thou, the eternal Shepherd, wouldst not desert thy sheep : but through thy blessed Apostles wouldst keep them by thy continual succour. That they may be ordered and guided by those same rulers, whom thou hast appointed to execute thy ministry and to shepherd thy flock. Therefore with Angels and Archangels, etc.

Brief Liturgical Notes

THE essentials of the Lord's Supper, Holy Communion, Eucharist, or Mass—for, indeed, the Divine Liturgy may be called by any of these names—are as follows: a celebrant in priest's orders, bread and wine, the words of institution used with the intention of doing what our Lord commanded, and a communion. To these, as laid down by Western Christendom, the East would add the Epiclesis, or invocation of the Holy Spirit on the bread and wine. All other rites, however devout and edifying, are matters for ecclesiastical regulation.¹

The Roman Mass is the result of a fusion of the two principal liturgical uses of the ancient Latin West—the Roman, which seems to have been remarkable for its dignified simplicity, and the Gallican. The Order of Holy Communion, or Mass of the Anglican Prayer-book, is derived directly from the Sarum Mass, which was an English variety of the Roman. The reader will note that nearly everything which is to be found on the left-hand page of the Roman Rite as printed above—i.e. what is said or sung out loud—is contained in the Rite of the Book of Common Prayer, though the Gloria in excelsis has been transposed from the beginning to the end of the Mass.

From the earliest times the Liturgy has been divided into two parts, the Liturgy of the Catechumens and the Liturgy of the Faithful. This division is still prominent in the Liturgies of Eastern Christendom, whilst it has become obscured in the West. The place of the division in the Roman Rite will be noted below.

Page 18: The Introit. This was originally a psalm, introduced, it is believed, by Pope Celestine (A.D. 423-432). ; it has now taken the form of which the following Introit is an example :

Turn thou unto me, O Lord, and have mercy upon me, for I am desolate and in misery. Look upon my adversity and misery and forgive me all my sins, O my God.

Psalm. Unto thee, O Lord, will I lift up my soul. My God, I have put my trust in thee : O let me not be confounded.

Glory be to the Father, etc.

As it was in the beginning, etc.

Turn thee unto me, O Lord, and have mercy upon me, for I am desolate and in misery. Look upon my adversity and misery and forgive me all my sins, O my God.

Page 29: Incense. The writer of the Peregrinatio Silvix (an interesting document discovered within recent years), describes, as an eye-witness, the use of incense at Jerusalem in or about the year 385. In Rome up to the ninth century it seems to have been merely carried before the celebrant and his ministers at the approach to the altar and at the reading of the Gospel.

Page 28: The Kyrie. Kyrie eleyson, Christe eleyson, though written in Roman characters, are not Latin, but Greek. The Kyrie eleyson was imported from the East into the Roman Liturgy about the fifth century. St. Gregory the Great seems to have added the alternative, not found amongst the Greeks, of Christe eleyson, and in his time there were petitions to which these words were the refrain. In the Middle Ages a custom arose of farcing the Kyries and other liturgical compositions—i.e. of adding extra phrases; e.g. Christe, qui lux es mundi, dator vitæ, eleyson. These farcings, or “tropes,” are practically abolished; the only relics of them are to be found in the English Rite, where the Kyries are dispersed amongst the Ten Commandments with the trope, “And incline our hearts to keep this law,” and in the Sequences of the Latin Rite (see below).

Page 30: Gloria in excelsis. This hymn is of Greek origin, and dates from the fourth century at the least. It was originally a hymn sung at Mattins, and when first introduced into the Roman Liturgy was limited to Easter, when the Bishop celebrated.

Page 32: The Collect. So-called because in ancient times the people had fully assembled or collected for worship at the point where this prayer was said.

The Epistle, Gradual, etc., and Gospel. The two lections, Epistle and Gospel, are the only lections which have survived, since the sixth century, except on Ember Wednesdays and Saturdays and a few other occasions.

The following is a specimen of a Gradual.

Be merciful unto our sins, O Lord : wherefore do the heathen say, Where is now thy God.

V. Help us, O God of our salvation, for the glory of thy Name : deliver us, O Lord.

The second chant, called the Alleluia, follows immediately :

Alleluia, Alleluia, God that sitteth upon the throne and judgeth right : be thou a refuge for the poor in time of trouble. Alleluia.

These liturgical chants are both of considerable antiquity.

In penitential seasons the Tract is substituted for the Alleluia ; it consists of two or three verses of a psalm.

A Sequence is a metrical composition occasionally attached to the Alleluia. Sequences are really tropes of the Alleluia, and date from the ninth century onwards. Only five survive in the Roman Liturgy (see note, p. 34), but the present Pope is credited with the intention of bringing back several old sequences which were abolished in 1570.

The procession with lights and incense before the Gospel to an appointed place for the reading of the same is a very ancient liturgical feature.

Page 36 : The Nicene Creed. Introduced into the Eastern Liturgies in the fifth century, it was used in some parts of the West in the sixth century, and said to have been put into the Roman Liturgy by order of the Emperor in the eleventh. Here the Liturgy of the Catechumens ends and the Liturgy of the Faithful begins.

Page 41 : Note that the celebrant says Let us pray, but nobody prays ! As a matter of fact, no prayer has followed this exhortation for more than a thousand years. The prayer which has dropped out is the ancient Prayer of the Faithful at the unfolding of the corporal, with which in the East the Liturgy of the Faithful still commences.

The Offertory prayers and ceremonies have undergone considerable changes. In Dominican churches the elements are prepared either before the service or between the Epistle and Gospel. In the East the Bread and Wine are solemnly prepared before the service and brought in with great pomp (the Great Entrance) at this point.

The Offertory sentence consists of a single verse from a psalm, varying with the day. It dates from about the fourth century.

The pain béni is a relic of the Agapé or Love-feast. It also survives in the East under the name of the antidoron.

Page 53: The Secret Prayers, so-called because they are said at the setting apart (Latin secernere, secrevi, secretum, to set aside) of the Bread and Wine for consecration. The custom of praying silently and raising the voice at the conclusion, "Per omnia sæcula sæculorum," termed an ecphony, is ancient. The Canon of the Mass, or Anaphora, immediately follows, beginning with the Dominus vobiscum and Sursum corda. (In modern terminology the Canon begins a little later, with the prayer Te igitur.) This has not been appreciably altered since the fourth century.

The Sursum corda is probably of apostolic origin; it is certainly as old as the third century. The Preface (in some form) and the Sanctus are also of extreme antiquity.¹ The conclusion of the Sanctus—i.e. the Benedictus—is of later date.

Page 67: Notice that in the Unde et memores the word panem, "bread," and calicem, "cup," are still used, though, according to Roman teaching, the sacramental change is effected by the words of institution. The ancient teaching seems to have been that still held by the Eastern Church, that the consecration is completed by the Invocation, or Epiclesis. That this was also the Roman view in early times is clear from the fact we have noted, and also because after the Supplices te rogamus, the equivalent in the Roman Anaphora to the Invocation, the Bread and Wine are called the Body and Blood.¹

The prayers beginning with the Te igitur have been said secretly by the Celebrant since the eighth century.

The Roman Canon is not, as it stands, a primitive composition. Liturgiologists differ as to its exact history, but it is certain that some additions and transpositions have been made. The result is not wholly satisfactory, but, on the other hand, we have to admit that it is more satisfactory and primitive than the present order in the Book of Common Prayer. In our Rite the unfortunate changes in 1552 omitted some of the primitive features of the Liturgy, and dislocated what remained; these changes have survived the last revision in 1661. The Scottish and American varieties of the Anglican Liturgy are better than the type, especially the former.

The Elevation of the Host at this point is a ceremony which dates from about the thirteenth century, though St. Anastasius of Sinai, writing in the sixth century, mentions the custom of the priest lifting up the Bread of Life and showing it to all, an elevation which certainly took place after the Epiclesis.

¹ Thus for the last thousand years the language of the Supplices te rogamus has been an endless perplexity to Roman theologians. What, for instance, are "these" (hæc)? Pope Innocent III., to give one example, commenting on this prayer, writes: "So great is the depth of these words that the human mind is scarcely able to grasp them."

Page 73: The Lord's Prayer and the Fraction. These were transposed by St. Gregory the Great.

The Kiss of Peace is mentioned in the New Testament,¹ and has been given in the Liturgy from the earliest times. It is a touching ceremony, which seems to transport one to the catacombs.

Page 76: The Agnus Dei. This dates from about the seventh century. It assumed its present shape in the eleventh.

Page 78: The Communion. A variable anthem consisting of a verse from the Psalms. Inserted about the fourth century.

Page 88: The Deacon's dismissal, Ite, missa est, is ancient. The word "missa" or "mass" has been used as a name for the Eucharistic service from at least the fourth century. The Last Gospel is a late addition to the Liturgy.
